GARRETT BIGGS

Garrett Biggs is a partner in the Los Angeles-based Republican political consulting firm Blair • Biggs Campaigns. Garrett Biggs is a Los Angeles native who cut his teeth in politics by working on numerous Los Angeles-area campaigns including Congressman Jim Rogan's final reelection campaign and for Assemblyman Nao Takasugi's campaigns, who is featured in Tom Brokaw's Greatest Generation book.

Garrett Biggs continued developing his craft working on political campaigns, and in 2001, started Blair • Biggs Campaigns with his business partner, Todd Blair. Prior to starting their firm, Garrett Biggs and Todd Blair met during Dick Riordan's successful 1992 campaign for Los Angeles mayor and worked on numerous campaigns thereafter. Over the years, Garrett Biggs and Todd Blair have worked on nearly 100 campaigns.

A full-service firm, Blair • Biggs Campaigns has run numerous campaigns from Hawaii to Maine.

Services provided include strategic advice, TV productions, media placement, direct mail, media relations and research.

Blair • Biggs Campaigns has won national recognition for its work on political campaigns. In 2006, the American Association of Political Consultants recognized Blair • Biggs Campaigns' work by awarding the firm with a "Pollie Award" for a TV spot produced for Governor Schwarzenegger's Proposition 77 campaign. The spot, as well as previous "Pollie Award" work can be viewed at the firm's website:
